XXXI. Grossularia alba vulgaris.

Hocce genus erucarum quâvis ab arbore fructiferâ grossula-riâ tamen præprimis albâ pabulum sollicitat, incorpore cineritii coloris sunt hæ erucæ, quarum per dorsum nigra decurrit linea, lanuginosæ sunt admodum, capite flavo constant, ponè caput à quolibet latere quinque cærulea ac per corpus rubra gestant corallia, Augusto mutant formam in aurelias è lucido fuscas tactæ circumvolvuntur, Septembre albis, flavis nigrisque lineis virgatæ phalænæ prodeunt.

Cineream hanc erucam in mensem usque Julium enutrivis gramine, confectâ sibi telâ cinerea, cinereum pariter in aureliam inversa fuit, mense Augusto ex obscurò coloris auricaci phalæna inde prodiit, ova pariens viridia.

XXXIII. Acacia germanica.

tæ, humido valde delectantur, vespere ad unam omnes in eandem telam sese conferunt, aranearum telæ similem, in decimum usque Julii diem hisce foliis eas enutrivis, harum quælibet ovalis figuræ telam bombycum more texebant, & in aurelias nigras degenerabant, in fine Julii è lucido fuscæ phalænæ inde producebantur, ovula sua circum circa ramulos pariunt, formantes annulum, quâm ob rem difficili negotio exterminantur.

In excrementis earum acaros inveni, qui degenerantes indoliola, quatuordecim dierum spatio in suprà depictas muscas reformati fuerunt. Frutici inferiùs adhærens subflava eruca in gradiendo celerrima in folio viridi circumvoluta sedem figit; hisce foliis in finem usque Maii enutritur, postmodùm in aureliam fuscam immutatur, denique post quatuordecim dies è lucido fuscæ phalæna excluðebatur.
